

Aboriginal Evidence Building in Partnership Project

Their Futures
Matter

Their Futures Matter is the NSW Government's reform to transform life outcomes for children, young people, and families.

Our Aboriginal Evidence Building in Partnership Project will develop stronger evidence of which supports work best for Aboriginal children, young people, families, and communities.

Are you achieving great outcomes for Aboriginal children and families?

We are looking to partner with a number of promising Aboriginal organisations. If your programs are showing positive outcomes for Aboriginal children, young people, and families, we' like to hear from you.

We are particularly looking for programs that focus on early intervention, parenting skills, strengthening families, and other areas that support Aboriginal children and young people to live safely with their families.

Linking organisations with experts

If selected, you will have the opportunity to choose from a number of experts who can work with you in the areas of evidence building and evaluation. This expert will partner with your organisation, assisting you to better demonstrate the value of your program and the impact it is having on your community.

This will help you to:

- Not only showcase your achievements, but also prove how effective your program is at improving outcomes for Aboriginal children and families.
- Improve your ability to attract funding or expand services
- Support your community to keep more Aboriginal children and families together in safe and loving homes.

Are you eligible?

The Aboriginal Evidence Building in Partnership Project is targeted at Aboriginal organisations that work with Aboriginal children, young people, and families in the areas of:

- early intervention
- child protection
- parenting skills
- family support service
- out of home care
- other general areas that support Aboriginal children and young people to safely live with their families in the community.

Contact us if you:

- Are an Aboriginal organisation delivering programs for children, young people, or families in NSW
- Are an organisation that delivers effective services to Aboriginal children, young people, or families
- Have a reputation for producing great outcomes for your community
- Are interested in building a strong evidence base and/or undertake evaluations to improve your program delivery.
